

Hey Lisa,

I wanted to keep this mostly short and sweet. First I want to thank you. Not just for being someone I can always talk to about anything. Not just for making me feel loved and desired. Not just for holding me until we were the only people in the world. You pushed me through a myriad of self-growth. You showed me the importance of crying. My flaws came back to bite me in the ass and I had never realized how much it hurt until you gave me many needed slaps on the wrist.

You are such a genuinely amazing person. To you, your personality is dull but to me it's a precious gem but without that frivolous shiny luster. And honestly next time you say "I'm so stupid" or anything like that I need to tell you off for badtalking my baby :)

I love you so much and I am so grateful to be a part of your life.

Yours,
Damian
